INTRODUCTION

TigerThrift is a web-based platform that facilitates buying and selling clothing and promotes sustainability within the Princeton undergraduate community. Noticing the cluttered and decentralized methods students currently use to sell clothing on campus, TigerThrift centralizes and streamlines the clothing thrifting process within a private and reliable community of Princeton University undergraduates. Accessible to all students via a secure, user-friendly web-app, we employ a simple yet flexible process to sell and buy items as well as to complete transactions. Overall, TigerThrift seeks to support, simplify, and centralize the thrifting process on campus.

USER ASSUMPTIONS

- ❖ You are not visually impaired.
- ❖ You are proficient at reading and understanding basic English.
- ❖ You have access to a web browser on a mobile/desktop device connected to the internet.
- ❖ You are a Princeton undergraduate student who is familiar with CAS authentication and have a valid netid and password.
- ❖ You have access to your Princeton email account which can send and receive emails.
- ❖ You have online shopped before (or are familiar with it). Specifically, you understand the process of filtering/sorting items to search.
- ❖ You understand general clothing categories.
- ❖ You can discern whether you are logged in or logged out.
- ❖ For Professor Dondero and all COS333 TAs (Bri Butler, Joshua Gardner, Anat Kleiman, Dorothy Zhao), we assume that you will be using the netids (rdondero, bb5943, jg41, anatk, dorothyz) respectively

ADDITIONAL BACKGROUND

- ❖ Payment: Payment is managed third-party, such that the buyer and seller will meet up on campus so that the buyer can receive the item and either complete/cancel the reservation. At this time the buyer will pay the seller using a mutually agreed method of payment if the buyer decides to purchase the item. TigerThrift confides in the honor system prevalent on campus, trusting that buyers will pay the sellers upon receiving their item. In the event that users have any issues, they can conveniently contact us via email.

- ❖ Since there are two parties (two types of users) involved on this platform, buyers and sellers, certain actions are tailored towards the ease and convenience of buyers and sellers, which is why some use cases are specific to buyers or sellers. TigerThrift also uses email notifications for reservation confirmations, reservation cancellations, and to send reminders for when a reservation is about to or has expired.
- ❖ All of the following use cases can be completed on a mobile or desktop device, however please note that the screenshots shown below were taken on a laptop screen.
- ❖ Also note, the “Landing” “About” and “Tutorial” pages can be viewed while the user is not logged in, but navigating to any other pages or links besides those will trigger the CAS Authentication login screen in order to proceed.

Demonstration of Main Functionalities

To demonstrate the main functionalities of our website, we will narrate a mock user(s) scenario where the seller will be shown in the screen shots as Katelyn Rodrigues and the buyer as Catherine Keim in the screenshots. As an individual user, you may be one of either the seller or the buyer in this case, so you can just follow the respective steps in this scenario.

In our mock user(s) scenario, there are two users completing the buy-sell process on our site. There is a seller (Katelyn Rodrigues, as demonstrated in the screenshots) who is selling a green ruffle dress, and a (potential) buyer (Catherine Keim, as demonstrated in the screenshots) who is looking for a green ruffle dress.

The seller of the green ruffle dress would complete all actions highlighted in blue in this user scenario. In this scenario, Grader 1 can act as the seller.

The buyer of the green ruffle dress would complete all actions highlighted in green in this user scenario. In this scenario, Grader 2 can act as the seller.

A potential seller might complete the following workflow. At a minimum, the seller must complete the “Sell” use case specified below, so that a potential buyer can complete their use cases later.
